ABOUT

ANNETTE BRIDGES

Named after Disney Mouseketeer Annette Funicello, I am a huge Disney fan. In fact, my hubby and I celebrated our 35th anniversary at DisneyWorld.

I was very young when I learned the power of the written word!

My very southern mamma gave me my first journal when I was ten years old and instructed me to record my blessings. This was during our journey from Georgia to Texas when we were basically homeless with very little money. Using my journal to recognize and honor the blessings of each day allowed me to see what we had rather than what we didn't have.

A lifetime of journal keeping would become the inspiration for hundreds of fun-yet-insightful columns published by Texas newspapers, parenting magazines, websites and bloggers.

My first published essay was a guest column in the Dallas Morning News after my only child left for college. That's when I went from a brand new empty nest mom wondering what in the heck I was going to do next to a prolific published writer.

Nowadays, I'm a cattle rancher, magazine columnist and creator of books, journals, t-shirts, home décor and more that empower, encourage and entertain. I write a monthly column for North Texas Farm & Ranch magazine titled, "When a City Girl Goes Country."

My husband and I have been Texas cattle ranchers for over forty years. I love to write, doodle, paint and take photos of our ranch animal friends. My art, photography and MY LIFE inspire the products I create.

“ Whatever else I do in the future as a writer, I hope to help every woman realize HER STORY is extraordinary, valuable and noteworthy. ”

GET READY TO LAUGH, CRY, AND BE INSPIRED

while you gain valuable insights about what it takes to be truly happy and feel purpose-filled. My life is an open book. I create what I need and share my creations with YOU!

I've walked through depression, self-condemnation, regret, disappointment and grief. I've felt alone. And I've struggled with the weight of burdens. I don't want to feel alone anymore and I don't want you to feel alone. Let's care for our weary hearts, ask for help and encouragement, give ourselves permission to take a time-out and refuel ourselves with hope.

ABOUT

Ranch House Press

Have you ever felt like you just absolutely HAD to do something?
That's the way I was feeling when I began writing my books.

One of my childhood dreams was to write books. But I also wanted to write songs and be an actress. All of these dreams were set aside when I got older, went to college and got married soon after.

A decade of column writing was brought to a sudden halt by health problems. After recuperating from a scary surgery and overcoming my own fears of death, I knew it was time to fulfill my writing childhood dream. And I hoped that my years of column writing had built a foundation from which I could draw upon.

Rereading all of my columns while recuperating, I realized that many of my columns were inspired by lessons learned from my very southern, sassy mamma. So it was natural for this to be the basis of my first memoir book published in 2012, The Gospel According to Mamma.

My writings take readers on a journey to find deeper meaning in their own lives. My books are a compilation of my personal discoveries and I sincerely believe we should share our life lessons with one another. That this is how we can become somebody's angel.

"Herstory" is written one woman at a time. This is a huge missing element in our American History, so says my historian daughter. She says it's sometimes difficult to do women's history research because many women in our past did not record their memoirs.

I can't help but wonder if women have not always believed their lives, their experiences, their opinions and their lessons learned were of value, significant and worthy of being recorded. Without this belief, it's understandable that women would not invest in the time to journal their memoirs.

I encourage every woman to write her story whether or not you ever dream of making them public.

Your experiences, wisdom, knowledge, insights and inspirations will be a resource treasure to your family. And the fact is, even if you never share your memoirs with your family in your lifetime, the process of reminiscing and reviewing your stories of struggles and triumphs will serve as a guidepost to your self. Even simply the process of writing your memoirs down can be healing, therapeutic and rejuvenating.

This has been true for me as I shared my life lessons and experiences in columns and books. All of my writing began as journal entries, then as newspaper and magazine columns and eventually as a collection of my memoirs grouped into books.

Ranch House Press was formed to publish my books, journals and coloring books but I hope to inspire other women to publish their "herstories" in any way I can!

ABOUT

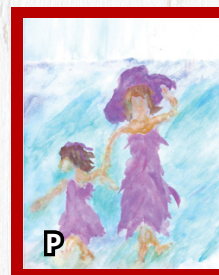

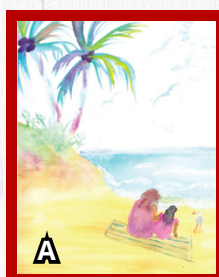

My writing, art and photography inspires everything I create for my Ranch House Gift Shop. I am as prolific and passionate about creating items for my shop as I am with writing my “When a City Girl Goes Country” magazine columns. I’ve been called an idea queen! I’m influenced by everything I see and experience in my everyday life on our Texas cattle ranch. My desire is to empower, encourage and entertain with all I create.

Folks can currently purchase my products in my Ranch House Gift Shop on Etsy. After years of also having a shop in a nearby town, I am now moving toward my dream of selling my products wholesale to boutiques and retailers.

Shop owners can choose from my books, journals, notepads, magnets, mugs, notecards, coloring books, shirts and so much more. My Home Décor & More Unique Items include such things as recipe cards, tea towels, potholders, magnetic bookmarks, gift tags and bags, window decals, stylus pens, laptop stickers and more as I’m always thinking of new products to create.

As you browse my products, it will become very clear that I am especially captivated by cows and dachshunds, but I have a new cat love in my life that has prompted some of my latest creations. My product ideas are pretty much propelled by what I love or need.

the JUST shirts

Just so you know, since many words have many meanings depending on how they are used, in the case of my JUST shirts, the word "Just" is an adverb that means "Simply." The phrases you'll see in this shirt series have become commandments for my life. In my longing for more simplicity and joy, I've found power in having a word or phrase of intention that directs my thoughts and actions throughout the year. My hope is that these shirts will inspire and encourage you in your own search for happy living.

It was in December of 2018 when I received an email from the magazine's editor inviting me to join their monthly columnist team. What this dear editor didn't know is the struggle through grief I was living with when I received her email. I had just lost my mamma, my step-dad, and my seventeen-year-old dog all within the past couple of months. I was devastated as well as emotionally exhausted from the past several years of caregiving. I had lost two of my brothers a couple of years earlier, too. I was sad. I had not even begun to think about what I would do next with my life. Up to that point, my days were totally committed to caring for all of my beloveds. My new "quiet" was almost unbearable.

My first column "When a city girl goes country" was published in the February 2019 magazine issue and continues to this day.
